ABSTRACT

Methods are provided for the treatment of choroidal neovascularization by increasing, in an individual afflicted with choroidal neovascularization, in vivo concentrations of an endostatin protein in the ocular tissues of the individual to a choroidal neovascularization inhibiting effective amount, where the endostatin protein has anti-choroidal neovascularization activity in vivo.